

Hina'i Approach

Kauhale

(Program – the Practice)

- Expansion of indigenized food production systems in 3 regions.
- Expansion of eduprise activities to establish YLT Programs in the Ewa and Waialua regions.
- Establishment of SFCS Program at University of Hawai'i at West O'ahu.
- Generate new social enterprises as part of the indigenized local food system.

Communities of Practice

(Policy – Learning from Practice that Leads to Action & Change at the Individual/Family, Community, & Systems Levels)

- Establish Communities of Practice (COPs) in each region and across the 3 regions.
- Identify "best practices" and "lessons learned".
- Develop "alternative" metrics and indicators of success.
- Identify and mobilize "policy initiatives" at the individual/family, community, and system levels

Hina'i Network

(Process – the Relationships)

- Establish, grow, and strengthen the Hina'i Network.
- Support the on-going interface between project partners within each region and across the 3 regions.
- Develop new relationships and strategic partnerships that support, develop, and sustain Hina'i.
- Generate a diverse range of new and complementary social enterprises and economic opportunities along the value chain that strengthen the local economy.

Restoration of Ancestral Abundance

('Āina, Kanaka, Hana, & Communal Governance)

- A sustainable local food production system that is a vibrant regional economic engine.
- A localized indigenous workforce that regenerates and revitalizes the regional food system.
- Empowerment generated from reciprocity and communion between people and the 'āina (that which feeds).
- Integrated economic and academic systems that restore ancestral abundance and pathways for self-governance.
